I am an experienced election official and have participated in the election process for the City of Detroit Election Commission for over 30 years. It has been my experience that elections are to be run in a way that is fair to all sides. When absentee ballots are sent out in the mail to voters, there is no campaign literature urging voters to vote for any candidate or for any proposal. The election process is strictly neutral. When I received my ballot to vote to approve or reject the plan of adjustment, I received at least one letter, along with my ballot, urging me to vote to approve the plan. There was nothing included in the ballot package urging me to reject the plan. In all fairness, each side should have had an opportunity to influence the voters or neither side should have had an opportunity. The balloting process was unfairly rigged to sway pensioners to vote to approve the plan and therefore, I object to the ballot process.
